Course AimsWhy study this course

This course will provide you with the skills for a critical understanding of the hospitality industry within its tourism sector context. It will develop an awareness of the different approaches to management in the hospitality industry that reflects its global nature. The course will be both thematic and issues-based. This approach reflects the critical interdependence of economic, environmental, cultural, societal, and environmental facets of the tourism and hospitality industry and the people involved in it. The skills and knowledge gained will underpin the ethical, professional, and technical approaches necessary for a successful career in tourism and hospitality management.

Educational Aims

The course is aimed at developing a sound understanding of the principles and practices of the global tourism and hospitality industry and the ability to apply theory to contemporary issues. In addition to this you will become an independent and reflexive learner, using an awareness of opportunities for careers or further study in the setting and monitoring of personal objectives. To meet this, it is expected that you will evaluate different perspectives to inspect global political, economic, social, technological, legal, ecological and business environments.

This course therefore expects students to:

Solve problems by the application of appropriate tools and techniques, and research.

Understand and apply the body of knowledge fundamental to hospitality and tourism management.

Work effectively in teams or individually using appropriate professional standards of conduct and behavior.

Challenge the business of hospitality and tourism with a rigorous approach to practice informed by relevant theory and learning.

Teaching, learning and assessment strategies

in your first year of study a range of integrated, project based activities which will set the tourism and hospitality industry in the
